All Newfoundland Stops Work When It's Annual Regatta Day

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. JOHN'S (CP)— Newfoundland's annual Regatta Day, as for many years past, brought crowds today to the grassy slopes of nearby Quidi Lake to watch the light, six-man shells racing for the Lieutenant-Governor's Cup.

With sideshows, band music and flag-bedecked fields, everything else becomes incidental on Regatta Day as factories close and business houses pull their blinds. Except for three brief intervals, it's been the same for 120 years.

From the time the sleek British Columbia-built shells are pushed into the water the city and surrounding communities became virtual ghost towns until the final race is over and the more enthusiastic fans have waded neck-deep in the water to congratulate the winners.

GREAT TRADITION

Records of the event date back to 1828, but J. D. Higgins, president of the Regatta Day organization, says there were races before that. There was a 10-year lapse from 1860 to 1870, and the First World War halted the races from 1914 to 1919. The only interruption during the Second World War was in 1940.

Down through history, many different types of boats have been used. Punts, gigs, jollyboats and whaleboats figured in the early days. The racing shell appeared in 1901, when the Outer Cove entry covered the 1 3-5 mile course in 9:13.8, a record that remains unbroken.

Since then, similar shells have been built here by Bob Sexton, a carriage factory employee who turned out one each year, selling it for $2,000. He died three years ago and with some of the shells deteriorating, the regatta committee last year turned to British Columbia where a company at Kelowna manufactured 500-pound shells for about $1,400. This year's regatta is the first to use these new shells. As they weigh only one-third as much as the older ones, records may be broken.

U.S. AIRMEN COMPETE

The closest challenge to the 1901 record has been about 15 seconds slower. The average crew does the course in 9½ or 10 minutes.

United States Air Force teams from nearby Pepperell air base have been competing since 1941.

By tradition, no arrests are made for intoxication during the races, unless of course things get way out of hand. The big event apart from the races is the raffling of a new car. It's only in the last 20 years that this has replaced such diversions as catching the greased pig and climbing the greased flagpole.

When the pig was turned loose in the crowd in the old days, whoever caught and held it could take the porker home.

CHURCHES COUNCIL

The world Council of Churches was formally constituted Aug. 23, 1948, at Amsterdam by representatives of 147 churches from 44 countries.

NIGHT OUT—Former Hollywood star Brenda Marshall is all attention during a tete-a-tete with her husband, Oscar-winner William Holden, in Rome, Italy. They were attending a dinner at which the Rome Film Writers' Guild presented the Silver Ribbon, Italy's equivalent of the Oscar, to the best actor, actress and movie of the year.

IN THE CITY, where major powers are trying to reach agreements that will affect the world, some lesser—but less troubled—individuals hold their own conference. A wandering youngster in white beret takes a close look at the headgear worn by a dapper cab horse and pays him a diplomatic compliment.

WESTERN TOUCH

HYTHE, England, (AP) — When a young bull ran amok in this Kent town police waved rain-crowds scattered. A horseman with a lasso finally halted the capers toreador fashion and animal.
