WHEN SOCCER TELEVISED

LONDON A -- British professional soccer players insisted today that when television cameras are turned on them during league matches they automatically become actors.

So they refuse to play in matches televised by the BBC unless they get extra fees.

The BBC agreed to start discussions on the matter with the players union December 31,

Major soccer league games generally are televised on

Entertainment unions are supporting the soccer players. "We may have to consider further action," said union chairman James Guthrie.

"Further action" could mean a strike.
