DAILY EDITION

Saturday, August 3, 1911

The following timely article appeared in a recent issue of The Daily Colonist:-

"You may quote me as saying that in my judgment there is nothing in the present situation, nor in possible future developments, which justify any alarm being felt by the people of this Province, and particularly the business communities, as the the permanancy of their positions as citizens and property interests."

This statement was conveyed to The Colonist yesterday by Sir Richard McBride. The Premier continued: "We are passing through, a testing period. Let us be calm, as we are courageous and confident.

"I take the view that it behooves everyone of us to be considerate of the position of his neighbor at this crisis. In a thousand ways embarrassments involving pecuniary relations may ensue for a time, but this only imposes upon us the obligation to devise a thousand ways for allaying these embarrassments.

"It would be as unpatriotic as it would be foolish and unwarranted for each individual at this time to act the part of self-seeking opportunist. Most of us are by necessity non-combatants; but we must see to it that we acquit our selves like men in the peaceful paths of good-citizenship."
