DAILY EDITION  Friday, August 28, 1914

Few queries are put more frequently these days than this: How long will the war last? It is obvious, of course, that any answer to the question must be conjectural. Russia is an empire of wide area and an enormous population, but the number can only be approximated, as no such census as is taken in Canada is ever taken in Russia. The country is very productive, but most of its peasantry are distressingly poor, and bear a burden of taxation that is crushing. Nothing is spared by the tax gatherer; nothing is exempt from seizure.

Germany has a population of about 55,000,000. As a whole the population of Germany is far more intelligent and capable and freer from superstition than is that of Russia. It has an immense regular or standing army, well officered, and usually enthusiastically patriotic.

Austria-Hungary is composed of many peoples of different nationalities and of diverse religious and political faiths, and is not financially or as concerns its army nearly so strong as is Germany.

France is financially the strongest of the foreign nations—using the term "foreign" as distinguished from Britain and nations speaking the English language. Her people are the most thrifty and economical in the world, and their faith in their government is absolute and unquestioning, while for forty-four years they have cherished a purpose of revenge against Germany.

Britain is in many respects the greatest of all the European nations, the best governed, and with the most extensive dominions. Her superior power on the sea is unchallenged, and her financial resources are enormous. The Belgians are brave and patriotic, but Belgium is a small country, as is Serbia, and neither will control the result.

There will be millions of men on the battlefield, and they are in large part taken from the fields of productive industry, especially from the farms. There must necessarily be a great reduction in the production of foodstuffs, and as Germany imports much foodstuffs at all times, it seems inevitable that the question of food, not only for the army but also for the non-combatants, must soon become a serious problem and one which must directly affect the length of time the war will last.

General Hunger will prove the strongest soldier.—Exchange.

NOTES OF BELLA COOLA AND DISTRICT

Mr. Jos. Fall, Provincial Government engineer, arrived by the Camosun on Sunday and is at present registered at the Grand View Hotel. Mr. Fall is here for the purpose of permanently locating the route of the projected road from this place to Tatla Lake and will be accompanied on his trip by Mr. Frank Johnson, whose knowledge of the country and conditions should prove of great assistance.

Already several of our neighbors in the valley have responded to the call to arms and have left to join the various forces which are shortly expected to leave for the seat of war.

E. Gyllenspitz, the well known farmer of the Upper Valley, visited town during the week, returning to his ranch on Friday with a full load of supplies.

W. Gunn came through on foot from the Cariboo, arriving here on Friday morning. He reports that Mr. Robert Lowe, with his survey party, is on the way to this place and will arrive in a few days.

F. A. Johnson, Mrs. Kivett and Harry and Chester Kivett, of Firvale, spent last Sunday in town.

Local fishermen are prepared for the commencement of the coho season, but pending the settlement of the price of fish to the fishermen no start has yet been made. It is anticipated that the cannery will be in full swing again by the middle of next week.

The church service at the Mackenzie School on Sunday evening next will be conducted by Mrs. Livingstone, provincial organizer of the W. C. T. U. Rev. T. C. Colwell is paying his periodical visit to outlying districts.

Owing to the frequent rains which have fallen in the northern portion of the province this summer, the Forest Branch has concluded that in a number of districts the forest guards can be withdrawn from patrol and employment on permanent improvements, such as trails and cabins, and also in clearing dangerous slash.

THE DAILY PRESS AS AN EDUCATOR

"The Journalist writes for his contemporary, not for posterity," says Professor Slosson. Perhaps that is the reason why of all the kinds of literature that the printing presses of the world daily grind out, the newspaper is the most transient and the least preserved. It passes hurriedly through our hands to the wastepaper basket, and not to the library shelf. Yet, does one ever think how much he is actually influenced and educated by the short but regular contact with the reports of what his fellows are thinking and doing?

"The newspaper is the pulse of the world," says another writer. Place your finger on it and you perceive humanity's dull beat in the ordinary walks of life; the recording of births, marriages, deaths, the displaying of advertisements of lands, houses, shop sales, businesses, articles of luxury, medicines, books, stocks and shares, theatre shows, "wants" for assistants, servants, husbands, wives, represent merely its function as a cogwheel in the industrial machinery. Touch it again and you note the red blood running warm and fast telling of the thrilling upward march of science, art, discovery; or again and you feel the fevers of civilization run riot through the veins telling plainly of the inward convulsions of war, the panicky shrinkings of the stock market, the swelling of the oceans and the winds.

The daily press has hitherto been an institution for adults; it is only lately that it has catered to the youthful reading public. The magazines have undoubtedly set the example in this direction. For many years back there have existed special periodicals for boys and girls. Of later years some of the big publishing concerns have issued and regularly put forth journals devoted almost exclusively to matters of interest in woman's sphere. Today nearly every big city "daily" has a page devoted to children's stories, and has one also where the fair reader may regale her mind with news items and spicy "clippings" of feminine interest. I am venturing to say here, because the trend of newspaper enterprise seems to justify it—that it will not be long before the young people's page will carry daily prepared lessons of different grades to the children. Such a step might be one of distinct benefit to people living in remote country districts. Am I stretching my imagination too far when I picture a second Lincoln relating to an admiring audience how he had walked weary miles of country road in wind and storm to get the daily paper and how lying before his rude open fire place, he had without a teacher, spelled over and over unsystematic symbols of sound and juggled with the mysteries of squares and cubes?

Nothing escapes the eagle eye of our head miller in his laboratory as he tests sample after sample of grain from the Prairies, grinds them up in his miniature flour mill and then makes a batch of bread from each—the supreme test!
