Lady Borden, wife of Canada's Premier, is seen sitting at the desk in her office of an Ottawa departmental store, where she was general manager for the day, with a staff of 1,000 under her, including all the cabinet ministers' wives and leading society women. Five per cent. of every dollar taken during the day was given to the Red Cross Society. The receipts were $1,759.31. On the left is shown Mrs. J. A. Wilson, secretary of the Red Cross Society, and secretary to the general manager, Lady Borden, for the day.

INDIAN GURKHAS HOW THEY FIGHT

A large percentage of the Indian troops who will be employed in the war are Gurkhas, infantry soldiers, whose superiors in fighting do not exist. In the early days of the East Indian Company they were hostile to the British and attacked them on several occasions. With the Treaty of Segauli, signed in 1814, the territorial limits of the Gurkhas were clearly defined. They now form a very important factor in the Indian Empire and supply its army with the infantry so renowned for its loyalty and courage. The first test of their fidelity occurred in the Indian mutiny, when they rendered invaluable service to the British forces. Throughout the Afghan wars and the frontier campaigns they increased their reputation and maintained it throughout the international war of 1900 in China, when the British became involved and sent a military contingent to the front. In physique the Gurkhas are diminutive, yet stocky and well proportioned. They bear an instinctive hatred for cavalry, whose horses they are adept at hamstringing. In addition to the ordinary equipment of the soldiers, they carry a number of weapons peculiar to their race, particularly a broad curved saber and a quoit shaped weapon, the outer edge of which is exceedingly sharp, and often effective when the weapon is hurled, quoit fashion at an enemy. The Gurkha troops number over 20,000. In religion they are Hindu, and they are of Mongol descent, their ancestors having intermixed with the aborigines of Nepal, the state which they now inhabit and of which at one time they were supreme owners.

PEOPLE STARVED AND HOMELESS

Picture of Ruin and Desolation in Belgium Brought by Member of Parliament—Savagery of the Germans.

London, Oct. 5.—Mr. J. H. Whitehouse, member of parliament from Lanarkshire, who has returned from a tour around Antwerp to assist in relief measures, brings a graphic picture of the desolation of Belgium.

To supplement the defences of Antwerp, he said today, hundreds of thousands of trees had been cut down and houses destroyed, so the enemy would find no cover for attack. Another part of the country had been flooded, the damage of these precautionary measures totaling $50,000,000. Termonde, a city of 16,000, has been systematically destroyed, he said. A blind woman and her daughter, groping among the ruins, were the only persons remaining in the once beautiful town. The remainder of the population, he was told, had fled in all directions. Some had reached Antwerp, but a great number were wandering about the country, panic stricken and starving. Many were already dead.

"What had happened at Termonde," he went on, "was similar to what had happened in other parts of Belgium under the military occupation of Germans. The result is that conditions have been set up for the civilian population throughout the occupied territory of unexampled misery."

"Sometimes when a town has been bombarded the Germans have withdrawn and the civilians have returned to their homes, only to flee again at the renewed attack. A case in point is Malines, which, on Sunday last, as I was about to try to reach it, was again bombarded."

"The inhabitants were then unable to leave, as the town was surrounded, but when the bombardment ceased there was a great exodus."

"The whole life of the nation has been arrested. Food supplies which would ordinarily reach the civilian population are being taken by the German troops for their own support. The peasants and poor are without the necessities of life, and conditions of starvation grow more acute every day. Even where there is a supply of wheat available the peasants are not allowed to use their windmills owing to the German fear that they will send signals to the Belgian army."

"We are, therefore, face to face with a fact which has rarely, if ever, occurred in the history of the world—an entire nation is in a state of famine, and that within a half day's journey of our own shores."

This war has not been given a name yet. Why not call it the War of the Censors?

FRENCH EXACT BLOODY REVENGE FOR SEDAN

London, Oct. 6.—During the strategic retreat of the Allies southward from the Belgian frontier, the French troops exacted from the Germans bloody revenge for the French defeat at Sedan 44 years before.

On this same battlefield, according to the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail, the Germans suffered one of the worst defeats of the invasion. They were led into a trap which cost them thousands of men, he says. The French could have held their position indefinitely, but strategy required them to continue falling back with the remainder of the Allies along the line. Here is the story of the second battle of Sedan as told to the correspondent:

"The French general ordered his troops to fall back across the river and take up a position on the opposite heights. The bridges were mined, but were left standing in order to deceive the Germans into thinking that the French were retreating hastily. The ruse succeeded. The Germans advanced across the bridge in close formation. When several German regiments had crossed the French blew up the bridges and the French artillery started firing at 100 German columns, which retreated hastily to the river only to find the bridges gone."

"The French advanced with quick fire and the merciless slaying continued until dusk. The Germans threw down their arms and attempted to swim the river and were drowned. At nightfall the French brought up searchlights and continued the work of carnage."

"The artillery threw shells at the rate of dozens of rounds a minute into the German ranks and varied its tactics by throwing incendiary shells into the forest where part of the German force had taken refuge. The burning woods lit up the whole front for fifteen miles."
