SHOW FEELING OF DEPRESSION

People of Germany Now Realize That War Is Not Going Well for Them.

New York, Feb. 6.—A cable from London says:

"Alfred Arnold, a New York Herald and London Daily Express correspondent, who has just returned from a tour of Frankfurt-on-Main, Dusseldorf, Elberfeld, Bremen, Hamburg and Munich, writes that the most significant symptom he observed was the appearance of a definite peace party in the industrial centers and the organization of peace meetings and placarding to stop the war. Posters at Dusseldorf were discovered and led to the arrest of a number of persons who attended a peace meeting.

"On the whole the prevalent sentiment in Germany is one of depression and anxiety. Stories of great victories, especially over the hated British, are no longer credited. War news is scanty, and has lost its power to cheer.

"The coarseness of the now prevalent foods—actually scarce, but the fare is war fare—revolts the German appetite. All dainties are reserved for the hospitals.

"Only paper money now is used in Germany, and all gold and silver has to be surrendered to the municipal authorities."

POINDEXTER SEES FUTURE FOR MOOSE

Senator Says if Party Quits, Its Members, for Most Part, Would Join Republicans.

Washington, Feb. 6.—In response to questions as to the future of the Progressive party, the possible lines of its future activities, circumstances under which it might amalgamate with the Republican party and its present condition following desertions to the Republican party, Senator Poindexter has furnished the following signed statement to the New York Sun:

"I am not fully able at this time to answer fully the questions which you ask in regard to the Progressive party. Whatever the future may determine as to the Progressive party as a separate and distinct political party, the progressive movement is bound to go on and be one of the chief factors in our politics and government.

To Continue in Some States.

"In states where the Progressive element is strong the organization will continue in any event, whether a separate ticket is put in the field or whether its influence is executed in conjunction with the progressive Republicans in Republican primary elections.

"I can say in answer to one of your questions, that there will be no amalgamation in the sense of any surrender of the great principles of which the Progressive movement and the Progressive party are incidents. There is fundamentally a vital difference between liberals and conservatives or progressives and reactionaries, whether in one party or the other—Progressive, Democratic or Republican.

Natural Political Division.

"This difference will continue. It is the natural political division, and when some great concrete issue of vital interest to the people is presented party division will take place along this line.

"So far as the present political situation is concerned, the Progressive party has claimed all along to be the party of Lincoln Republicanism. It also favors a reasonable protective tariff. It believes that under existing conditions an active and powerful Federal government is essential. For these reasons, should there be no separate Progressive ticket, the great bulk of those composing the Progressive party would make their fight in the Republican party rather than in the Democratic party."

Other Leaders Coincide.

Charles S. Bird, of Massachusetts; Charles S. Bonaparte, Senator Moses E. Clapp, George Ade, Medill McCormick, Willis J. Hulings and Fred E. Lewis furnished somewhat similar statements. The Sun finds that the consensus of opinion of these leaders is "that unless one of the old parties comes around to the constructive principles of the Progressive party, the Bull Moose will be in the field in 1916 with a national ticket."
