LAUGHABLE OUTCOME OF THE DACIA CASE

The French Foreign office has decided to pay the owners for the cargo of cotton on the German steamer, Dacia, which changed her registry to the United States and sailed from Galveston under that flag.

This practically ends the Dacia case, and in writing the epitaph it might be said that nothing has happened during this war to put the United States Diplomatic Corps and the Administration in more ridiculous light.

When one compares the terrific onslaught hurled against the United Kingdom, following the first announcement of the Dacia case, all of which was unfair, the allies being well within their rights, with the calm and polite ladylike manner in which the U. S. Administration accepted the piratical destruction of the bona fide American ship William P. Frye by the German cruiser Prince Eitel, one naturally begins to speculate as to whether or not there is any patriotism or fair-mindedness left among the cheap politicians of this country.

On the other hand, we have the German ship Dacia, sailing under a subterfuge of false colors, and the allies, acting well within their rights probably, taking her into a prize court, causing hostile words directed exclusively against Great Britain, with the upshot that France takes the aggressive and the matter is dropped.

On the other hand, we have a German warship, without any excuse whatever, disregarding all rules of international law and warfare, scuttling a bona fide United States ship, not one sailing under false colors, but one that has been built and has forever been operated under American registry, and was carrying a non-contraband cargo.

Can it be possible that the fact that there is such a thing as a German-American vote and there is not an Anglo-American vote is the cause of the Administration's method of forever blaming the United Kingdom and over-imagining affronts, while white-washing Germany following the piratical and unlawful acts of that country?—Railway and Marine News, Seattle.

CANCER IS HEREDITARY AND NOT CONTAGIOUS

The view of a medical research worker of the University of Chicago, Miss Maude Slye, that cancer is a hereditary disease and not contagious, will attract widespread attention.

She asserts that cancer is not a germ disease, but is transmitted from generation to generation, and is not curable in the ordinary sense. Experiments have proved, she says, that the offspring of cancerous mice is as certain to have cancer as the children of negroes are to be black.

Just as sure as cancer has been and can be bred into a family; just so surely can it be bred out. By the proper eugenics cancer could be eradicated among human beings, the main point being not to have cancer on both sides of the family. I have proved it time and time again in the laboratory.

Many theories have been advanced as to the causes of cancer, and every little while somebody is reported to have discovered a "cure" for the disease. Thus far, however, cancer has proved to be one of the most baffling problems medical science has to deal with, and the most trustworthy advices are that the only hope of relief is through surgery, and at the earliest stage of the disease.
