GEMS FROM DUNCAN ROSS' GREAT SPEECH LAST NIGHT

"Mr. Clements objects to some extra silverware on the Government ship Montcalm. Mr. Clements couldn't make this argument stick in the cent belt; where they do say the medium of exchange is not even coppers but beans."

"Mr. Clements objects to the cost of Wilson gas buoys—the greatest boon that was ever conferred upon men who go down to the sea in ships. Of course if Mr. Clements' policy succeeds there will be so little shipping to do that the old fashioned coal oil lantern will be good enough; but with reciprocity we want our harbors and waters lit up with the most modern equipment, so that the great trade to be done will be done with the greatest safety to the men engaged in the work."

"The most scandalous tactics are being used by the provincial government to thwart the will of the people in this election. Road superintendents, road foremen, fire wardens, game wardens and a mighty host of paid hirelings of the Provincial Government are going up and down this constituency trying to bulldoze the electors into voting against their own best interests. But, thank God! the ballot is secret and they will not succeed."

"The most outrageous scheme of all is the employing of special constables at all the polling booths—constables appointed by W. J. Bowser, attorney general, and sworn in by Tory justices of the peace in this riding. These men have been appointed agents for H. S. Clements and we have the edifying spectacle of a candidate having his agents paid out of the treasury of the Province of British Columbia. These men have been appointed and are being paid without any authority from the legislature and without any warrant in law."

"Even the Mayor deserts the civic chair and goes up and down the constituency trying to convince the people that they should vote against Prince Rupert's and their own best interests."

"One would naturally expect a Vancouver real estate man to knock Prince Rupert; but what about a few of our own people living here with all their interests here?"

"How can you explain G. R. T. Sawle's position on the fishing industry. Mr. Sawle must have been sleeping in the morgue with the Conservative candidate and he caught the knocking habit."

WAGE WORKER'S STRONG SPEECH FOR RECIPROCITY

"Charlie" Hunter Gives Audience and Fellow Workers at the Ross Meeting Lively Advice to Vote For the Measure That Helps the Worker

One of the most telling speeches of the evening in support of Ross and reciprocity was that given by Mr. Charles Hunter, the workingman speaker, who is coming to the front amongst audiences in Prince Rupert.

He came on the stage in his plain workman's off duty garb and made a strong impression on all his hearers.

"If the Liberals here think I have come to hand them bouquets," he began, "they are mistaken. (Laughter and applause). But if any Conservatives here think I mean to roast the Liberals, they are mistaken, too. (Renewed laughter). Working men here as a rule, have no use for party politics. I have heard some of my fellow workers remark 'well, there are lots of union men in this town who won't vote for Manson's bunch at the next municipal election because they don't hold with party politics, but they won't vote against them so that won't make any difference to him.'"

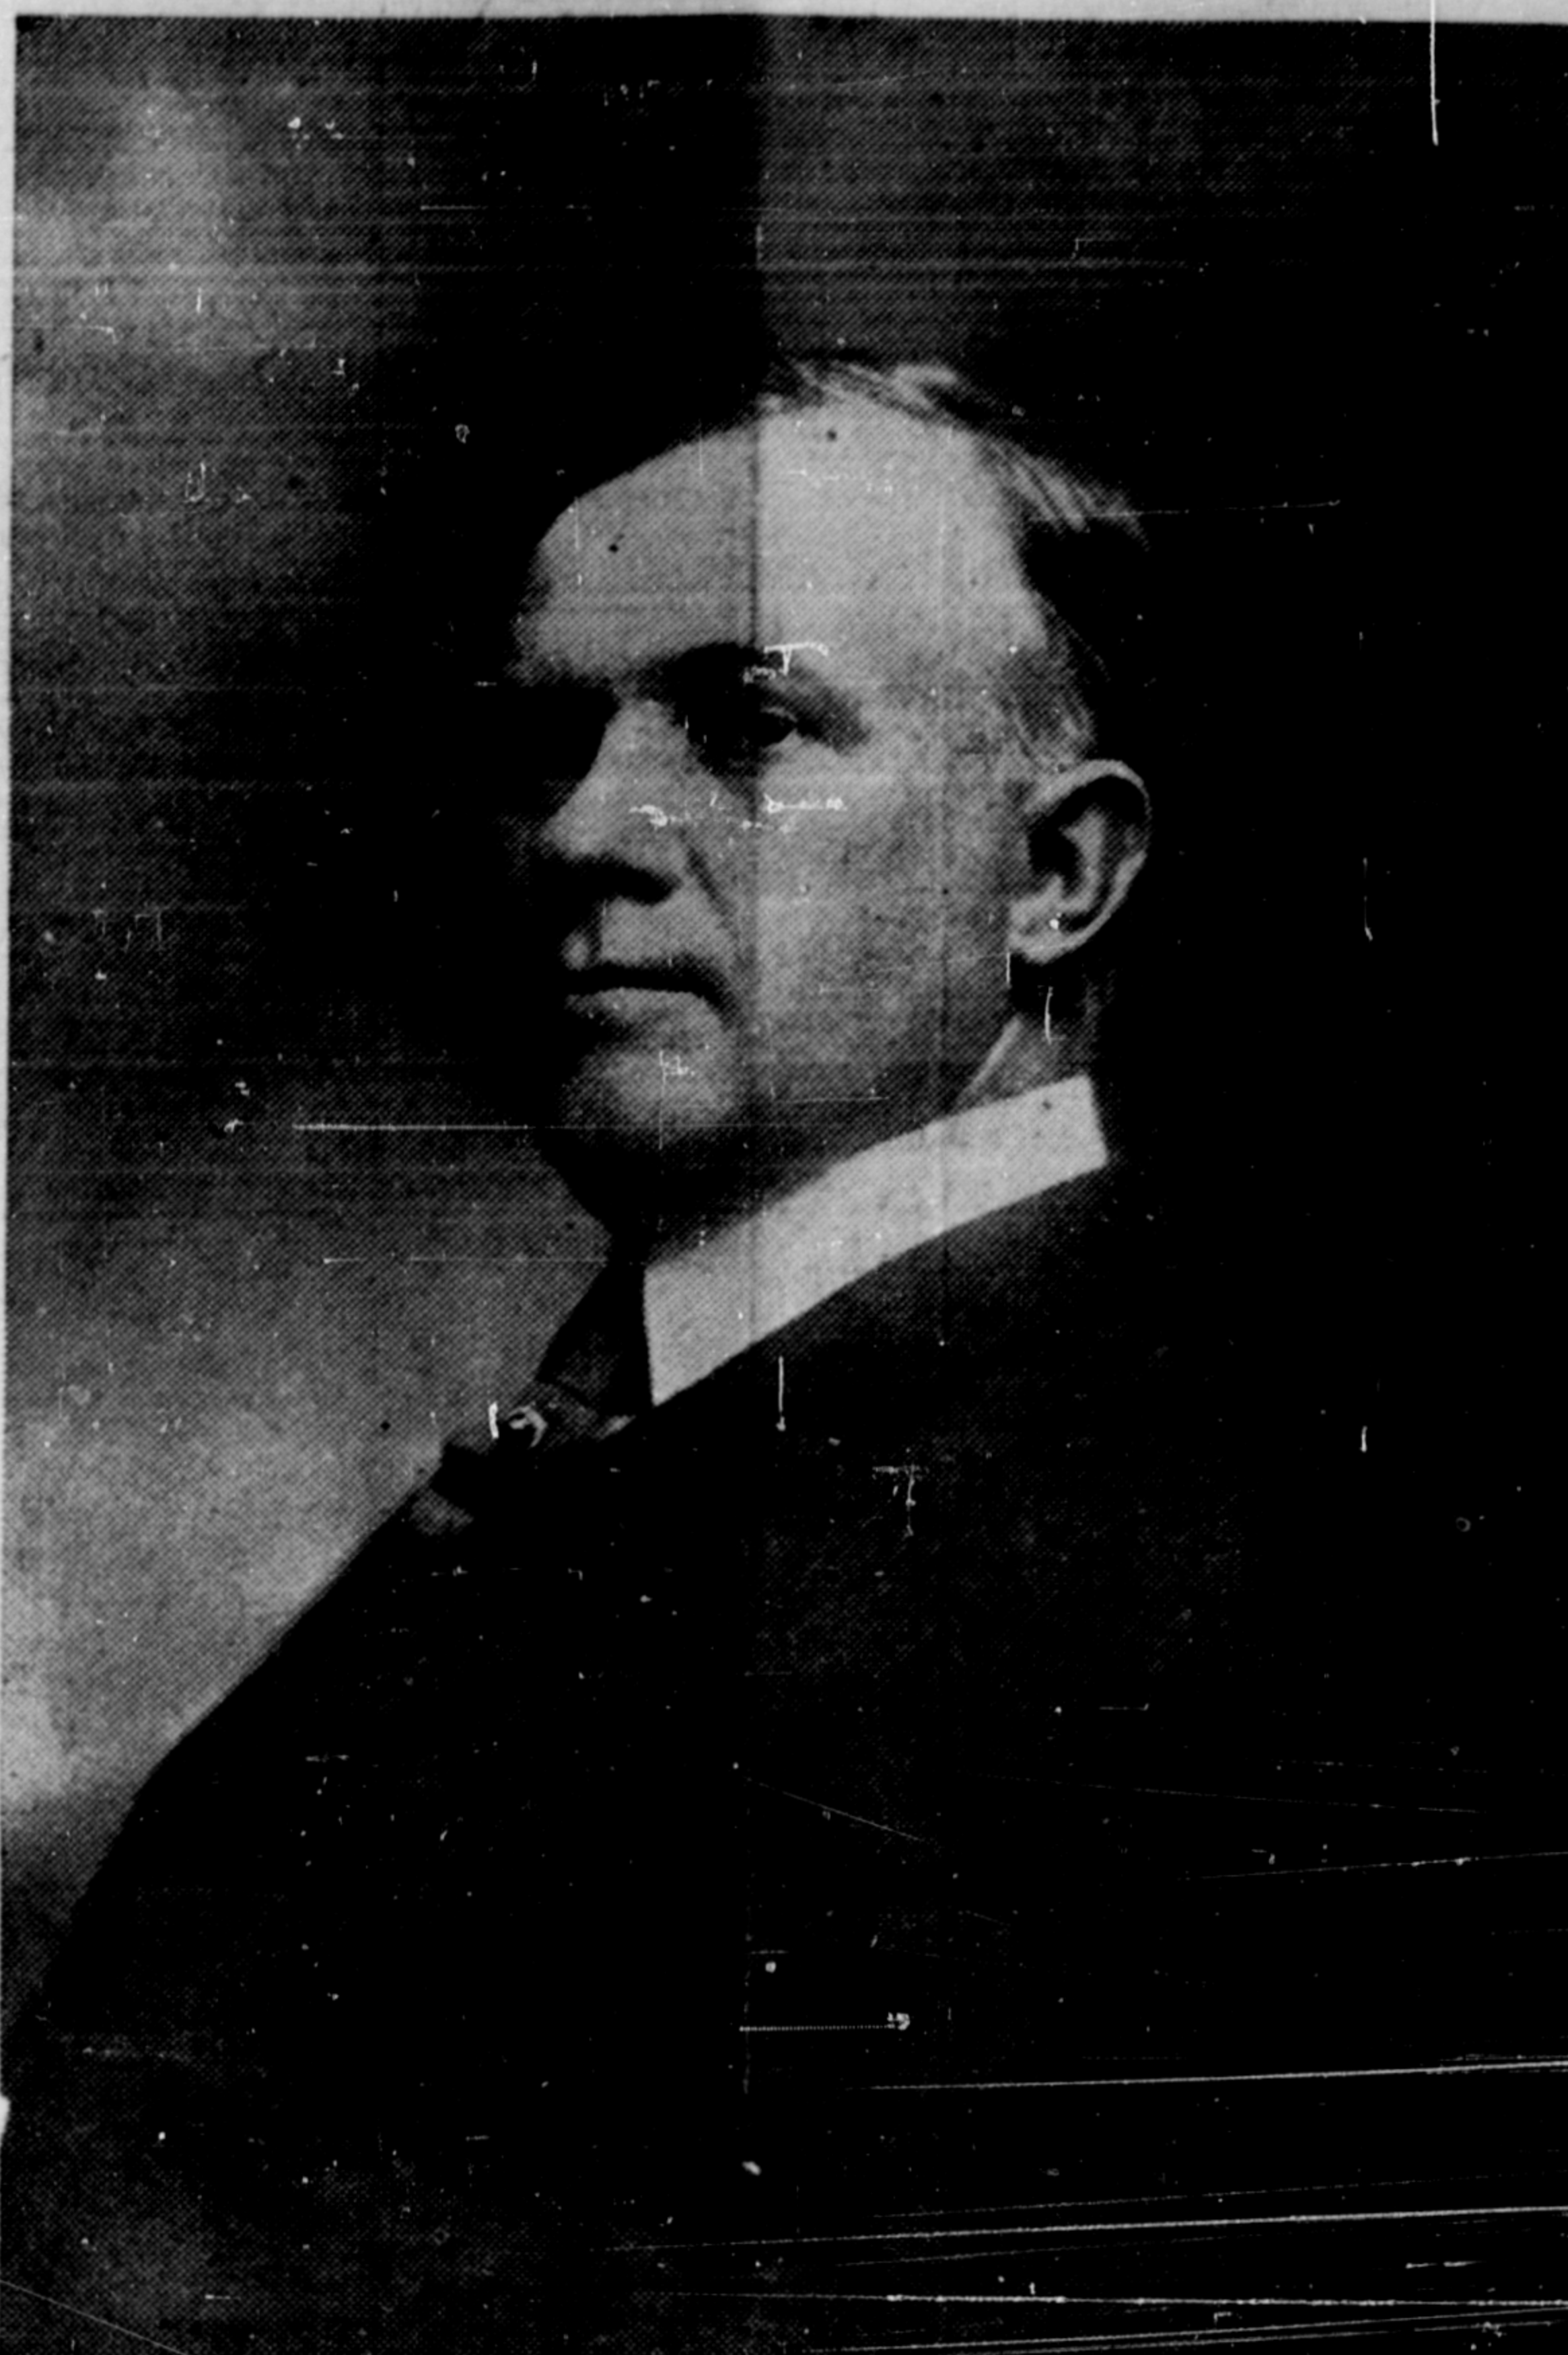

"Let me tell Mr. Manson that he needn't count on that for there is a strong body of workingmen in this city members of the two labor organisations I belong to who have had just about enough of that bunch of incompetents at the city hall, and mean to take a very active part, indeed, in municipal affairs this winter—and whatever may be on their programme it won't be party politics as Mr. Manson will find. (Applause).

"I am making an exception in this election myself. I intend to exercise the franchise. There are three classes of workers I know—men who vote for their party every time, the political kind; men who sometimes vote, but are unwilling to vote as a rule—and men like myself who intend to exercise the franchise. I hope all three will be out tomorrow at the polls voting for reciprocity."

"To those who believe reciprocity will bring trade and prosperity to Prince Rupert, I say vote for reciprocity. Again, if you believe what the Conservatives say about the United States trusts coming to gobble up Canada, vote for reciprocity for the most ardent supporters of your cause as workmen will then be the members of the middle class. And let me tell you that the Canadian Manufacturers' Association which is financing the Conservative cause in this campaign are your enemies, therefore vote for reciprocity—a vote for reciprocity is a vote for your own cause."

DUNCAN ROSS, LIBERAL CANDIDATE FOR COMOX-ATLIN

"The Government of Sir Wilfred Laurier will be returned, and I want you to return me because I want to co-operate with the Grand Old Chief in making Prince Rupert what it is destined to be—The Great City of the Pacific Coast."

MAGNIFICENT OVATION FOR DUNCAN ROSS ON THE EVE OF ELECTION

Right Candidate For Prince Rupert Receives Five Minutes Steady Applause Before he Begins his Great Speech—"Ross and Reciprocity" the Popular Candidate and Cause For Today

"The speaker I now want to introduce to you is our next Member of Parliament for Comox-Atlin," said Mr. Tom Dunn, after enthusiastic united singing of "The Maple Leaf" by the audience at the Ross meeting last night.

Mr. Ross stood forward amid terrific applause—cheers crashed out wildly for two full minutes—There was an instant's lull. Then as one man the huge audience rose in their seats with a tumultuous "tiger" that was simply deafening. In the midst of the cheering Mr. Ross was seen modestly stroking the white pelt of Mr. Clements' goat. The audience caught a glimpse of the action and yelled with delight.

Someone started "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and with a will the audience caught up the strains. It was a magnificent reception for a candidate on the eve of an election—and Mr. Ross showed his appreciation modestly, like the straight, strong man he is.

He Expressed Confidence

When the tremendous ovation had subsided—the audience ceasing to cheer from sheer fatigue—Mr. Ross began to speak:

"I face this great audience tonight with considerable confidence, and not a little thankfulness," he said: "confidence (with a glance at Clements' goat) because I am assured that this goat is really dead. (Applause). Thankfulness to you one and all for your extremely gratifying reception of me tonight. (Renewed applause).

Will Be a Great City

"If Prince Rupert is going to be a great city, as I believe it will, and as you believe it will or you would not be here, it is going to be so because it is the centre of one of the richest districts in Canada. (Cheers). And it is going to be so because it is the centre for the finest fishing waters in the Pacific. That being so,

GEMS FROM DUNCAN ROSS' GREAT SPEECH LAST NIGHT

"Prince Rupert hopes to be the centre of the halibut fishing. 'It is a false hope,' says Mr. Sawle. No Vancouver knocker in his worst mood could suggest anything more damning to the future of Prince Rupert."

"With reciprocity in full force and effect Prince Rupert will become the centre of all the northern fishing trade and neither the knockers from Vancouver nor the wailing Jeremiahs from Prince Rupert can prevent that."

"Our Conservative friends are telling the working men that reciprocity means cheaper living and cheaper labor. Their logic is as absurd as Sawle's fish logic. Reciprocity means employment for more fishermen, more longshoremen, more stevedores, more labor of every kind. It means prosperity and boom times and an ever increasing demand for labor—a demand greater than the supply and that always means a stiffening market for men's labor."

"What use are high wages to a man who cannot get work to do? Reciprocity means abundance of work and plenty of work always brings high wages."

"The Alaska trade freely granted to you by the reciprocity pact is the richest gift ever offered, since the Queen of Sheba presented King Solomon with the gold of Ophir. It is yours for the voting. Are you going to accept it?"

"George H. Cowan wants you to elect a Vancouver man to represent you and make Comox-Atlin an appendage to the ambitions City of Vancouver. Are you going to allow Vancouver to control your destiny or are you going to have your own member in the Parliament of Canada?"

"The Government of Sir Wilfrid Laurier will be returned tomorrow, and I want you to return me because I want to co-operate with the Grand Old Chief in making Prince Rupert what it is destined to be—the great city of the Pacific Coast."
