DOUGLAS WILL NOT BE DODGED

Suspects That Hurried Meetings are Held Without Him

"They seem to have a way of holding meetings here, and not telling me anything about them," said Alderman Douglas last night in reference to the streets committee. "They go to work and pass things without my having had anything at all to do with them. Now I am here at least twice a day, and they won't keep me from getting to meetings even if they lock me up in a room and lose the key. I am here to look after the interests of the people, and I will serve the people."

Later on in connection with the purchase of a scow, Alderman Douglas said, "I want to be consulted about these things. Since ever I have belonged to this committee I have been overlooked. Alderman Hilditch is trying to run the whole show."

NEW HOME FOR CUSTOMS DEPT.

Will Move into Piercy, Morris Co.'s Old Warehouse This Week.

After attending to their duties for a long time in frightfully cramped, stuffy and unhealthy quarters over the post office, the customs officials here will move into a fine large new home this week in Piercy Morris Co.'s old warehouse on Centre street.

Anderson & McKinnon, contractors, are fitting the interior of the warehouse up like modern offices. Every convenience will be installed by the contractors. A lease on the building has been secured by the customs department.

LIGHT PLANT ALTERATIONS

Street System of Arc Lights Proposed

Some changes are to be made at the electric light plant. Two firemen will be dispensed with for the summer months and the assistant engineer at the plant will do the firing in the meantime. An arc lamp street lighting system is to be installed at a cost of $3,000. The light committee think it would be in the best interests of the people to install the arc light system now to avoid interruption of the street lighting in the fall.

MARBLE FOUND NEAR HERE

Roy Chrisman, Prospector, Discovered Big Field

That dream of dwelling in marble halls, which almost everybody has occasionally, may soon be realised for people here, who have the money for big marble quarries have been discovered on Banks Island at a point only fifty-five miles from this city.

During a recent prospecting tour Roy Chrisman found the marble and brought samples of it here. One sample is a beautiful white and black streaked marble, very similar to the famous marble from Carrara quarries in Italy and apparently quite as good. The other sample is a bluish gray in color very much like that found in Eastern Canada.

Mr. Chrisman says there are about 320 acres of the goods, all as good as the samples. It is, he claims, easily quarried, alongside the waterfront with a clear face measuring along for 30 chains. It is possible for scows to get alongside the deposits and be loaded.

Mr. Chrisman has made known his find to L. W. Patmore, solicitor, who will set the machinery in motion to put the marble on the market.

The samples are on view in Uncle Jerry's office, Second avenue, and Mr. Kugler is acting as agent for Mr. Chrisman.

There is already some talk among builders in the city of using the marble for building purposes.

Three Months' Extension

Three months' extension of time on their Third Avenue Contract was granted to Rosang & Olsen by the council on account of delays caused by keeping the way open to the light plant. No extension was granted on account of the strike. Thirty days was granted to S. P. McMordie on account of city delays, none on account of strike. McMordie wanted three and a half months' extension.

Overworked Aldermen

Under "New Business" last night Alderman Hilditch put up a plea that the streets committee is terribly overworked, and the whole council agreed that the Mayor and all the aldermen are regular galley slaves just now, toiling early and late in the interests of the city.

Extra Water Supply

It would cost $17,785 to install the temporary water supply for the summer from Morse creek, according to the report of the City Engineer.

Mrs. J. Knouse, of the Panatorium, left yesterday on a visit to Chicago and other cities in her "ain country."

Discuss Scavenging

Considerable time was taken up in council last night in the discussion of the plans for scavenging the city, either by days' labor or contract. Eventually the matter was laid over for a day or two.

Bargain Scow

A snap in scows was offered the council last night by Captain Cates who is going to Vancouver. The scow which is suitable for dealing with the city garbage is offered at $950 which Alderman Smith says is about half its cost to build. It is nearly new. If examination of it this morning shows it to be in sound condition it will be purchased.

terial ordered for a better light supply so that it can be in by the fall, and not have to wait till December."

That Money By-law

"Wait until we see how much that money by-law is going to make out to," said Alderman Morrissey significantly.

"We have the question of the gas producer and arc light system in front of us now," said the Mayor.

Up rose Alderman Hilditch bewildered. "What do you want us to do, Mr. Mayor," he asked in the accents of a man ready to die for the Czar. "Do you want us to vote on the gas producer question. I would rather move it be laid aside for a few weeks."

Alderman Smith gently suggested that Alderman Hilditch did not quite understand the matter. The only intention was that plans and specifications of the producer plant should be prepared. However, the matter was tabled for a week, Alderman Hilditch wishing it were for two. There is a Hydro electric scheme in Engineer Thorapson's Woodworth report, but this could not be installed for twelve months.

dealing with it!" said Alderman Clayton.

"Capable or not capable it is for others to judge," went on Alderman Newton solemnly. "I am quite ready to pit my judgment against Alderman Clayton's any day."

"Wallowed in Darkness"

He went on to say that the engineers' department had wasted thousands of dollars of the citizens' money already. He fulminated about the electric light plant, said it was a disgrace to the city creating nothing but a deficit while the citizens sent "wallowing in the darkness." He burrowed into McMordie's sewers. He emerged from the abyssal depths of culverts below tons of dump. He climbed those Third Avenue light poles of his deploring the "disfiguring of the whole city by the engineering department." Up to the reservoir on Summit Hill he toiled bewailing its incomplete state while the city needs the water it might hold for fire protection and household use. Sewers, culverts, light plant, pole-line, water supply, all, all were monuments of the inefficiency of the engineering department—yet Alderman Clayton had said a layman could not detect defects in the work of the engineers. Alderman Newton was there to show him. The engineering department was an inefficient and expensive concern.

Smelt Belligerent

Like a departing thunder cloud grumbling in the distance Alderman Newton subsided, and Alderman Clayton rose with a sharp retort, saying that Alderman Newton's remarks about "pitting his judgment" against him were not decorous in the council chamber, yet still he had ideas of his own about the result of the contest. However, it was for a different arena than the council chamber.

Defends Department

The up rose Alderman Hilditch, eager to defend the City Engineer's department, evincing a desire to spell just a little humorous satire as a prelude to his remarks. "I am not going to attempt to answer all that Alderman Newton has said as I could not keep track of it all."

He proceeded to explain that if the City Engineer did not do as the council instructed him, well then, as he is a servant of the council his services will be dispensed with.

Back to Rome

None of your stereotyped introductions would do for Alderman Clayton in his speech in support of the City Engineer's department. He led off like a modern Cicero. He dipped into that historical classic "The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire."

"Gibbons tells us that the genius of Rome expired when Theodosius died," commenced Alderman Clayton. Continuing he took issue with Alderman Newton on several points. "Alderman Newton talks of pitting himself against me. I don't know the power of my colleague's arm, but even if he had the aid of his trusty lieutenant Alderman Douglas, it would not deter me from supporting the defence of the department."

Solomic

"Wobbling over from one side to the other" was the accusation hurled at Alderman Clayton by Alderman Newton. "He has been talking all along about cutting down expenses and here he has turned right round."

The Mayor sailed up here and called for peace.

Alderman Douglas took a whack at the bad management of the city and said J. A. McMaster had been replaced by "another lady."

Alderman Morrissey made himself clear that he would not support any retrenchment proposition that would interfere with the efficiency of the department.

A small audience greatly enjoyed the discussion breaking into gusts of laughter frequently. During one of Alderman Newton's long speeches the Mayor left the room for several minutes.
