BRITISH SUBMARINES SENT OFF TORPEDOES IN GERMAN HARBOR

(Special to The Daily News—9 a. m.)
Hull, Sept. 8.—Early last week destroyers and submarines of the British navy by a close survey discovered a passage between the mines which the German destroyers used in coming out to the North Sea. With that information a flotilla of submarines and destroyers proceeded to round up the German ships. When the operations were finished the British vessels returned to their base with the exception of one submarine. Much anxiety for the fate of the vessel was felt and the fleet concluded it was lost. Just as this fear began to be viewed as a certainty the submarine turned up. An explanation was soon forthcoming. The submarine actually penetrated the harbor of Bremerhaven where she fired two torpedoes. The Germans were panic stricken and in the midst of which the submarine took a dive to the bottom of the harbor. For hours the ship's crew remained there while the harbor was being trawled. Fortunately, they passed over her. As soon as it was considered safe the commander gave an order to proceed out of the German harbor. The submarine returned across the North Sea without mishap.
