LE BRAS D'OR IN LABRADOR

Now that an expedition has returned from Labrador, as announced drawing thousands northward from in yesterday's News, with a small steamer load of rich ores, there the United States." is a possibility that Canada's Atlantic seaboard may see development similar to that which has started on her Pacific seaboard.

Though with a less sheltered coast than has Northern British Columbia and with a less equable climate, Labrador is not the barren New Westminster is Rejoicing inhospitable country that it is popularly imagined to be. Its most southerly point touches the same latitude as North Vancouver Island; its northernmost latitude touches the Yukon boundary. Into its creeks shoals of fish swarm. Indian tribes live on its coasts, and in Construction work on the new the north bands of Eskimo. It has timber wealth, especially pulp paper mill on Brunette River is timber, and a recent traveller grew most enthusiastic over its berries, about completed, and the equipdeclaring that Labrador was the greatest berry country in the world. | ment will shortly be installed.

But gold is the great lure. Now that an announcement has been The location of the new papermade of gold in Labrador, many an expedition will be fitted out in making plant is ideal for the search of the yellow metal.

The surprising thing to the philologist is that the gold hunter had brought in with the greastest not sought Labrador before. Its name, the Anglicised form of La facility, and the finished paper Bras d'Or (the Arm of Gold), tells its own story of the days when shipped out on a spur from the Canada was the field of action for the gay adventurers of France. The G. N. R. title Arm of Gold was not bestowed upon that distant country for The building itself is a comnothing.

English history indeed tells of how in the days of Queen Elizabeth, after the plan of the paper mills when Sir Walter Raleigh was Lord of the Seas, three small ships set on Lake Michigan. The frame sail from England for Northern Labrador and there spent a summer work is made of sawn timbers and and a winter. Returning with a cargo of gold ore to England, the the sides are constructed of galexpedition eventually found that this ore would yield three ounces varized iron. Half a dozen great of gold to the ton. This was not considered a sufficiently good return iron banded vats necessary to by the London merchants who outfitted the expedition, so the little the proceess of making paper vessels did not make a second voyage. Three ounces of gold to a have already been installed. The ton would probably be viewed differently today. The Treadwell mines | machinery and manufacturing at Alaska are paying very comfortable profits on ore that yields equipment are being purchased in three dollars, not three ounces of gold to the ton.

According to Mr. E. Colpitts Robinson, F. G. S., who visited _ Labrador in 1909, confessedly in search for the precious metal, the land formation belongs to the Laurentian period, the northeast coast SILVERSIDES BROS. being composed of Laurentian gneiss, with intrusive granite and quartz veins. Resting of this are some of the lower Silurian beds. The sands carried down by the rivers are all that is known of the geological character of the interior, and these show that the interior contains rocks of gneiss with micaceous quartz.

All that it needs is someone to move the Japan current from Northern British Columbia over to Labrador, to make it a fine country to prospect in.

PASSING COMMENT

To be shot in the arm by a fellow hunter befell a man on Vashon Island last week. That was bad enough. But to have the explanation ... Whites Portland Cement ... made that he mistook him for a grouse is adding insult to injury. This is a new danger that the hunting season has brought.

The Chinese are going ahead rapidly. Not content with the news of a republic being started in China, two American born Chinese now attending Columbia University announce their intention to run for the Presidency of the United States when they are old enough. This has got some of the United States editors going. And some people think the Chinese are devoid of humor.

Talking of Chinese humor, a lady at Vancouver-we will call her Mrs. John Brown because that isn't her name-engaged a young Chinese servant. The Chink was modern, and States-trained.

"What is your name?" demanded Mrs. Brown on the first day. "My name is Hai Tai Lee Chung" (or something like that) said the Chinaman, in very good accent.

"Very well. I'll call you Wong," said Mrs. Brown.

"What's your name, Mrs?" asked the new servant.

"Oh, my name is Mrs. John Brown," explained the lady.

"Velly well, I'll call you old aunt Sally," returned the Chinaman, without the outward suspicion of a smile.
