AROUND PRINCE RUPERT

Vancouver Writer Reviews Portland Canal Situation; Cannot but Be Some Producers There; Should Not Be Too Optimistic, However

Many promising prospects have been located in the Portland Canal district, writes Reece H. Hague in the Ramor Vancouver Province. One very great producer has been . evolved, from other properties comparatively small quantities of ore have been shipped or milled locally, numbers of prospects have been developed and proved wanting, Another Option others have been mismanaged or improperly handled, still others have not been developed at all. It seems hardly logical to believe that the Portland'-Canal section will not produce important mines, in addition to the remier. The really big companies are reaching out their hands and securing some of the most promising of the properties and spending real money in proving whether or not they are going to develop into mines. Altogether, there into mines. Altogether, there is more actual development being carried out in the district at the present time than ever before in its history. The representatives of the big companies who are spending this money however, wish it clearly understood that at the present time their properties are in the prospect stage and, while they are hopeful of the outcome of their expenditures and in some instances are securing really encouraging results, they strenuously resent any attempt to beguile the general public into bethat they have already covered in the locality and all the really excellent work which is now being carried out there, it would seem absurd to think that mines of length and depth and general excellence will not be discovered.

This is a good the properties in the various parts absurd to imagine that, with the price for a property on which no work has been done, although the surface indications more than justify the expenditure on the part of Mr. Taylor.

Work will be immediately commenced for the purpose of developing and proving the property. The easy access to rail and road and the low altitude of the mineralized zone will make it possible to continue work during the coming winter months.

The property comprises the Os-Vancouver and Prince Rupert lo, Etna. Copper King, Roger, Sunrise, Sunset. Sandnas and Diamond mineral claims, all being adjoining and situated about three
