In the World of SportA MARVEL AT DANCING

Princess Radziwill Was in Forty-Four Dances in Five Hours.

Princess Albert Radziwill, who was Miss Dorothy Deacon, and who, since her reconciliation with her mother-in-law, has become a society star of the first magnitude, is in evidence at nearly every important function. The young princess has astonished people by her grace and endurance in dancing. Her friends have nicknamed her "Betka," and the society journals chronicle the beauty of "Donna Betka" Radziwill and her grace in dancing.

At Princess George Radziwill's ball this week "Donna Betka" went through forty-four dances, round and square, between 10 p.m. and 3 a.m., after which she appeared at an afternoon function without the least trace of fatigue, and announced that she would be quite ready to repeat the performance that evening.

CHANGED ITS COLOR

Peculiar Phenomenon Observed After a Horse's Illness

Sometimes a horse, after an illness, turns a different color. A lady in France, who possessed a splendid sorrel horse, found, on its recovery from typhoid fever, that its sparse hair grew an intense black. A young black horse trained for the race-course in England, was taken ill, put out to pasture, and doctored for some time. It ultimately recovered and was as well as ever, but its shining black coat had become an unusually sparkling red.

A young lady in this country at sixteen possessed a chestnut horse, went away to boarding-school, and, on her return, found that the color of her horse was changing, as she called it, "like a regular checker-board," with no definite illness to account for it.

Veterinary surgeons give all sorts of explanations for the changes of color observed in the hair of the horse. One, at the Pasteur Institute in Paris, has announced his opinion that the coloring-matter is affected by little changes in some minute and mysterious organs in the abdomen, answering to the suprarenal capsules.

When these are affected, the horse undergoes some developmental change the nature of which is not yet precisely understood.

The same thing, to some extent, is noted in the skin of man. Cobalt mines seem to affect workers, to tint their complexions and to change the color of their hair, and this also happens in factories where dyes are handled, the hair of such men and women often taking on a distinct bluish tint. Braziers and copper-smelters now and then find their beards and moustaches turning green.

BASEBALL TRAINING

Drinking Boozie Bane of the Player—Other Habits to be Corrected

How to become a big league ball player?

Well, the less you remember about the game the better off you'll be. What we want to teach you when you try for the Giants is the game and how to play it says Muggsy McGraw.

If you have speed in your legs, in your arms; if you are physically strong, know human nature, don't drink or sleep late hours, don't use tobacco, you'll make ball player.

When I send my scouts to look for material the last thing I say to them is: "Get the men with the physical qualifications and I'll make the players out of them."

Some of the best ball-playing material is found in the small towns. By this I do not mean brilliance, but ability. I would rather have a steady player than one who takes spurs and plays to the grandstand. A player recruited from a college or high school usually thinks he knows enough about the game already and needs no further tutoring. The country boy, as a rule, wants to learn and is willing to be taught. However, college men often make good players.

Drink is the bane of baseball. It has ruined some of the best players. Bugs Raymond, for instance. There is the best man that ever donned a suit. Drink ruined him. When I heard Bugs was drinking I put a detective on his trail. He made daily reports. His first report was that: Bugs drank twenty-four glasses of beer before dinner. Then Bugs $100. The next day Bugs drank twenty-six glasses of beer. I fined him another $100.

Then Bugs came to me and said: "I'm getting so much in debt to you that it won't pay me to play ball." He quit. And so on down the line of other players who have drunk themselves to ruin. However, sometimes when a player is getting "stale" I give a little ale after his meals. Smoking is also bad for the wind.

Another trouble we have with players is drinking water on the field. This is what we call the "water hag." Drinking water while playing makes a man bulky and may result in cramps. If a player gorges his mouth while playing it really does him as much good, if not more, than to swallow it.

I advise my players to eat only two meals a day and never to eat lunch. I have not eaten lunch in ten years, even during the winter months. If one must eat, it should be a sandwich or light lunch before playing; a hearty dinner might result in cramps the same as drinking water.

I am not in favor of this winter training. The less training a player does in winter the better off he will be for the season's work. I'm not in favor of indoor training of any kind. This is where the country boy has the advantage. He works in the open air and can stand harder work than the city boy. If one must have winter exercise, play handball for the wind. However, if possible, running should be practiced on the roads.

STOPPING THE CRITICS

How Rev. Mr. Sams Stopped Objections to His Decisions

Talking about getting close to the people, the following telegram appearing in the latest Australian papers, from Longreach, Queensland, is interesting:

At a boxing tournament in aid of the hospital, which a number of ladies attended, the contestants in the middleweight division were Sandy Thompson and Jack Miles. At the end of four rounds the judges disagreed, and the referee, Rev. Hulton Sams, who is well-known in Northern Queensland as the "fighting parson," gave the decision as a draw.

A good deal of boo-hooing followed. Rev. Mr. Sams invited anyone who disagreed with the verdict to step into the ring with him. This quieted the audience.

Rev. Hulton Sams was referee for the amateur boxing tournament recently, and official positions were held by two other clerics. Rev. Father Lane was timekeeper and Rev. C. Hicks, head of the Bush Brotherhood, was timekeeper. The reverend gentlemen proved efficient ringside officials, and carried their duties to the satisfaction of the contestants and the crowd.

THE BOXER'S LIMIT

The new rules of the French Boxing Federation bar boxers under 21 years of age, and this provision shuts out George Carpentier, who is only 18 years old, but who has won successively the bantam, feather, light and welter-weight championships of his country, and who recently disposed of the English middleweight champion, Jim Sullivan.
