CALLS IT A JOKE

That is a Winnipeg Paper's Reference to the Western League

The Winnipeg Free Press says "The Western Canada Baseball league was always more or less a joke organization, and as far as Winnipeg was concerned the fans could never take matters very seriously. To start with the circuit was by long odds too gigantic a proposition for any organization outside of a major league to attempt. The mileage was greater than the big leagues, and as the railway fare is higher here than in the States it meant that any profits that happened to be made at home, which did not happen very often, would be eaten up by railway fares on the long jaunt around the circuit. Last year they tried to get away from these long jumps by pairing off the teams and having them meet about 48 times or so during the season, but outside of Edmonton and Calgary this play proved a distinct failure, as in the case of Winnipeg and Brandon the latter team proved such a poor drawing card that the teams seldom played to more than a corporal's guard of enthusiasts. Then, again, there was the slipshod manner in which the league was run. There never was a man at the helm who was capable of handling the affairs of the organization in a manner which gave all the clubs entire satisfaction, with the result that there was always wrangling of some kind. As an example of grown-up business men trying to conduct the affairs of a baseball league the course of the club owners of the organization has been about as edifying as a large man with a goat and a red nose attempting the Grecian symbolical dance. But this does not make things any better for this year, and a few days ago it looked as if we were out of baseball for this season, but a last hope has arisen in the activity of some baseball people across the line to endeavor to resurrect the old Northern league, and it certainly would be a great boost for Winnipeg if such a thing went through. Duluth and Superior are anxious for the league, and if something can be done in a hurry it is possible that a real live organization will be formed that will mean the uplifting of the American national pastime here once again."

CROKER AIDS ATHLETES

The Irishmen Are Given Privileges on His Estate

Richard Croker has come to the aid of a number of Irish athletes who have abandoned Phoenix Park as a practicing ground. For quite a number of years a place known as the "Nine Acres" has been used by members of the Gaelic Athletic Association for sporting interests, but now they think they must find more congenial surroundings.

Sentiment, more than anything else, is the guiding spirit in their determination. Their "ground" is in the immediate vicinity of the spot where Lord Frederick Cavendish and Mr. Burke were assassinated in 1882—a fact, in itself, sufficient to attract to the neighborhood quite a number of those who have no sympathy with the Gaelic movement or with anyone professing allegiance to it. Efforts have been made from time to time to obliterate the actual scene of the tragedy, but without success, and finding that each succeeding year only helps to attract more "undesirables," the Gaelic athletes determined to desert the "Nine Acres" and go elsewhere. On a new ground at "Glencairn" Croker's sporting estate, they will be free from the crowd to whom morbidity is more attractive than health by sport. There will not be the same facilities for inviting all Ireland to see the athletic displays as there were in the park, but there will be sufficient room for the "boys" to wield the Camans to the delight of their friends, and to kick the ball under conditions which will be new to the majority of those who follow Gaelic sports in Ireland, especially to young athletes in the neighborhood of Dublin.

Montreal Must Pay $200.

President Barrow of the International League fined the Montreal club $200 for permitting the draft of the International league schedule to get out of its hands before it was officially released. The schedule was printed in two Montreal papers several weeks before the time set for the league. President Barrow says that he found out that Manager Lush gave out the schedule, but that Lush was ignorant of the fact that there was a penalty for doing so.

VARIED CAREER IN BALL

Wilson Matthews of the International League Umpire Staff Knows Game

Wilson Matthews of President Barrow's staff of International League umpires, surely has had a varied career in base ball. But for thirteen rainy days in a row, he probably would still be hobnobbing with the baseball moguls of the land. As the dice have been cast, Matthews is a newspaper man in winter and a baseball umpire in the summer months. Matthews had two seasons as umpire in the Texas League.

Starting his baseball career as a pitcher, Matthews was developed into an outfielder when his finger lost its cunning. He played in the South Atlantic League, Southern Association, Texas League and never came farther north than the Central League.

After several years as a player Matthews determined to take up umpiring and, attaining a reputation in some of the smaller leagues, he secured a berth on the arbitrating staff of the Southern Association, where he officiated in 1904 and 1905.

In 1906 he sought and secured the managership of the Savannah (Ga.) Club of the South Atlantic League. He succeeded in building up a strong team that eventually won the pennant over Augusta, Ga., by the margin of one and one-half games. Pitching for Augusta at that time were Ducky Holmes, now one of the Hustler's best mound artists; Nap Rucker, the great southpaw twirler of Brooklyn, and Cloutier, who has given a good account of himself with the Boston Red Sox. The fight for the pennant became so close and Augusta had such a good chance to beat out Savannah that forty-four games Holmes and Rucker alternated in the box. That season Holmes pitched sixty-two games.

Worked in Good Company

After producing a pennant winner for Savannah, the services of Matthews as a manager, were in demand among a number of minor league clubs. In those days the South Atlantic was considered a very substantial organization, many of its players, including Ty Cobb, Rucker, Joe Jackson and a score of others, being today stars in the major leagues.

Matthews, however, had some money and, as the Charleston (S.C.) club, of the South Atlantic League, was on the market, he bought some stock and eventually controlled it. Matthews proved to be a repeater in his new venture, as Charleston captured the South Atlantic pennant in 1907. With Matthews that time was Ote Johnson. Matthews had seen Johnson play in the Texas League and he was so impressed with his work that he promptly gobbled him up when given a chance. That fall (1907), Matthews sold Johnson to the Portland (Ore.) club of the Pacific Coast League. Matthews still thinks Johnson is a great player.

Mr. Matthews added that he believed Johnson could be developed into an ideal third baseman. He gave as his reason that Johnson is better as a ground ball right under the gun than at short, where he is farther from the plate. And, besides, he has the ideal throw for a first baseman.

Matthews finished third with his Charleston Club in 1908 and made some money. However, when the middle of the 1909 season was reached the club ran into thirteen consecutive days of rain and Matthews began losing patience and rapidly that he threw the sponge and disposed of his franchise to Knoxville, Tenn.

Journalist in Winter

Then he returned to umpiring in the summer, taking up newspaper work in the winter. He has had an extended experience as a news writer and editor. For four years he was sporting editor of the New Orleans Times-Democrat, specializing on thoroughbred horse racing. He also devoted considerable time to baseball, when not occupied with horse racing, on which he is somewhat of an expert. He was afterward connected with Louisiana and Texas papers, and last winter was night editor of a morning paper at Shreveport, La.

The previous winter he was war correspondent during the Mexican revolution for one of the New York papers. Being a native of El Paso, Tex., which is just across the border from Mexico, Matthews had acquired a good knowledge of the patois, besides learning Spanish. It was this knowledge that gave him an edge over some of the other correspondents during the insurrection.

Making his headquarters at the City of Mexico, or some other large city, he would secure the papers from the interior, and, by translating the leading article and sending them to his paper, he was able to score several "beats" over his fellow-correspondents.

German Universities Showing Great Activity in That Line

There has begun at Berlin University this week a national movement destined to work great changes in the traditional routine of undergraduate life at German universities. Representatives of fourteen universities, ten technical colleges, and a score of minor institutions met to discuss ways and means for introducing sports and athletics into German universities on British and American lines. The delegates at the Berlin meeting pledged themselves to make a vigorous propaganda among their fellow-students, in the hope that it may be possible in 1913 to hold at Leipzig a great inter-university meeting, to be known as the "German University Olympia," and repeated annually.
