Christians Preetings

ITH the Happiness as of Children pervading . . .

high may our heads be raised and loud may our hearts sing this Christmas for peace is here again. Like voices carrying across the new snow, like songs filling the still night, may we all—old and young—join once again in the full spirit of this Christmas Day. Relieved from the blight of war, may we play our part in the development of true friendship as we continue our efforts for real peace.

Many of us have our loved ones home again, others are on the way, some will not return but those who keenly miss them may derive comfort and satisfaction in the glory of their sacrifice.

That the morrow may be filled with enjoyment and the best of every good thing for all, that it may be as fine a Christmas as we have ever had is the spirit in which the Daily News renews this dedication in the gladsome Yuletide season.
